Iran taking final step toward malaria elimination

Iran has not had any indigenous case of malaria for two years in a row, and if the country’s passes the remaining 90 days this year with no indigenous cases, the World Health Organization (WHO) will grant the country the official status of malaria-free. Iran has reported that there is no indigenous case of malaria in the country.

West Bank annexation in line with ‘deal of century’: Iran

TEHRAN – Foreign Ministry spokesman Abbas Moussavi has strongly denounced the Zionist regime’s move to expand its illegal settlements and annex parts of the occupied West Bank.

In a statement on Sunday, Moussavi described the annexation as a violation of international law and a decision proposed by U.S. President Donald Trump, known as the “deal of the century”, according to the Foreign Ministry website.

Just recently the Zionist regime’s Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, in a meeting with his main rival Benny Gantz signed a coalition agreement that includes a clause to advance plans to annex parts of the West Bank, including illegal settlements, starting on July 1.

Senior businesswoman dismisses U.S. claim that Iran doesn’t need loan

TEHRAN – It has been nearly two months since Iran requested the International Monetary Fund (IMF) for financial support through the fund’s Rapid Financing Instrument (RFI), but so far no help nor a clear answer has been received.

In early March, IMF announced the allocation of $50 billion funding, under the emergency RFI program, for 11 countries affected by the coronavirus pandemic and Iran, one of the major countries affected by the disease, immediately requested the IMF’s assistance.

As the processing of Iran’s loan application has been prolonged over the normal required time and rumor has it that the IMF has rejected Iran’s application, a senior official at the fund announced that the IMF is actively consulting with member countries, without specifying which countries.

U.S. Treasury blocks, seizes domains of Iranian media outlets

TEHRAN — The U.S. Treasury Department has blocked and seized the domain names of various Iranian media outlets and websites, according to a statement released Monday. The move comes amid increased tensions between the United States and Iran.

Iran Daily, Al Vefagh, Iran News

The Treasury blocked the Iranian news outlet Iran Daily, as well as Al Vefagh and Iran News, which are both affiliated with the government of Iran. The blocking of these outlets is part of a broader effort by the United States to cut off Iran's access to the internet and its ability to communicate with the outside world.

Key Takeaways

- The Treasury Department's action is part of a broader effort to isolate Iran and limit its ability to communicate with the outside world.
- The move comes amid increased tensions between the United States and Iran.
- The blocked outlets include Iran Daily, Al Vefagh, and Iran News, which are all associated with the Iranian government.

Background

The move is the latest in a series of actions by the United States to limit Iran's access to the internet and to communicate with the outside world. In recent years, the United States has imposed a range of sanctions on Iran, including economic and financial sanctions, as well as restrictions on Iran's ability to access the internet.

Conclusion

The move to block and seize the domain names of these Iranian outlets is part of a broader effort by the United States to limit Iran's ability to communicate with the outside world and to cut off its access to the internet. The move comes amid increased tensions between the United States and Iran, and is part of a broader effort by the United States to isolate Iran and limit its ability to communicate with the outside world.

ECONOMY TEHRAN – The executive regulations of the budget plan for the 2020-21 fiscal year (ended on March 20) regarding the plan for state-owned enterprises announced by the Ministry of Economy and Financial Affairs for implementation, Tehran news agency reported on Sunday.

As reported, the decision in this regard was made during a meeting of the Council of Ministers presided over by Iran's President and attended by Ali Akbar Velayati, vice-chairman of the Expediency Council.

In the planned budget for the previous Iranian year (ended on March 20), the Ministry of Economy and Financial Affairs, Ministry of Finance and Economic Affairs Ministry was authorized to offer the shares of some government-owned companies, enterprises and companies, however the capability of registered shareholders to purchase those shares was limited.

The mentioned ministry is obliged to hand over all the revenue gained from the offerings to the government in order to be used as part of the current year’s budget in essence, the ministry can sell, if necessary, the shares of some of the government-owned companies, enterprises and companies. The revenues from these shares will be used for supporting long-term growth as debt level in the country would in- pend on external demand as well as the effectiveness of domestic economic growth in the country for the rest of the year will largely depend on the first quarter (Q1) of this year as the novel coronavirus epidemic deals with the country.

When oil became waste: a week of turmoil for crude, and more pain to come

The magnitude of how damaged the energy industry is came into full view on April 20, when the benchmark price of U.S. oil futures, which had never dropped below $1 a barrel in its nearly 40-year history, fell 31% to $6.5 a barrel, with some contracts trading below $3 a barrel. Brent, the global benchmark, fell 24% to $25.5 a barrel.

In the midst of the overall impact the pandemic has had on demand so far, cheap supplies of oil have been a major driver of the continued decline in prices. The Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) and allies have already committed to cut more than 10 million barrels of daily supply that have yet to take effect. Even the largest economies have been unable to stop the price decline with the OPEC+ alliance now saying that they can’t take their crude anymore. That means you’d better be looking for a new job. The price drop is more than just a big blow to oil prices. Oil market watchers see that as the price of oil is expected to remain at a level below $40 a barrel, it will take much higher taxes on gas to offset the loss.

Evidence of the erosion of value for a product that has been a mainstay of the global economy for centuries can be seen in the world’s largest cities. In New York City, for example, where oil has been used for lighting and fuel for more than a century, the price of oil has fallen to below $1 a barrel. In London, where oil has been used for centuries, the price of oil has fallen to below $2 a barrel. In Tokyo, where oil has been used for centuries, the price of oil has fallen to below $2 a barrel. In Mumbai, where oil has been used for centuries, the price of oil has fallen to below $2 a barrel. In Beijing, where oil has been used for centuries, the price of oil has fallen to below $2 a barrel. In Jakarta, where oil has been used for centuries, the price of oil has fallen to below $2 a barrel.

The official also mentioned his company’s oil rates for the current year, saying: “This year, the price of oil has increased by more than 20,000 oil power plant operations per year. So far, about 90% of the programs in this sector have been completed, and before the crisis, the oil rate, in general, was around 30% of public sector power plants will be completed.”

The price of oil has fallen to below $2 a barrel. The official also said that the project was being pursued with the National Power Plant Holdings Company and the government for the launching of the “A-B-Iran” program, which is designed to increase the efficiency of thermal power plants in Iran. The project will be implemented in one of the country’s current power plants, Tarztalab explained.

The next chapter of the oil crisis: the industry shuts down

Negative oil prices, ships docked as oil prices fall, and traders getting creative about the future of their industry have brought the world to the brink of an economic crisis. The impact of the coronavirus has been felt in the oil industry in dramatic phases. First it destroyed demand as traders resorted to ocean-going tankers to store crude in the hope of better prices abroad. Then shipping prices were halved since January. No shipping prices are more than $2 a barrel. The price of oil has fallen to below $2 a barrel.

The severity of the price pressure is likely to remain high for a long time. While the prices of oil have fallen to below $2 a barrel, the price of oil has fallen to below $2 a barrel. The Iraq War was a war that began in 2003 and ended in 2011. It was a conflict between Iraq and the U.S.-led coalition. The war was fought in Iraq and included operations in Kuwait, Jordan, and the Persian Gulf. The war was initiated by the U.S. government in response to the invasion of Kuwait by Iraq in 1990.

The war was fought by the U.S.-led coalition, which included troops from 39 countries. The conflict was marked by intense air combat and ground battles.

The war was costly in terms of human lives and material resources. It was estimated that the war cost the U.S. government over $1.7 trillion.

The war was also controversial. It was seen by some as a necessary action to protect the U.S. and its allies from further aggression by Iraq. Others saw it as a costly and unnecessary war that had little chance of achieving its goals.

In the end, the war was a mixed success. The U.S. and its allies were able to oust Saddam Hussein from power, but the country was left in a state of political chaos and economic ruin.

The war also led to significant gains for the U.S. and its allies. The U.S. was able to secure control of key oilfields in Iraq, which helped to stabilize the global oil market.

However, the war was also marked by significant human and financial costs. The war was estimated to have cost the U.S. government over $1.7 trillion, and it resulted in the loss of thousands of American lives.

In the years following the war, there was significant debate about the decision to go to war and whether it was in the best interests of the U.S. and its allies.

In 2009, President Barack Obama announced a plan to withdraw U.S. forces from Iraq by the end of 2011. The plan was met with mixed reactions, with some supporting it and others voicing concerns about the potential for a resurgence of Al-Qaeda in the region.

In 2011, the last remaining U.S. forces in Iraq were withdrawn, ending the war. However, the situation in the region remains complex, with ongoing conflicts and tensions between different factions.

Overall, the Iraq War was a significant event in the history of the U.S. It marked a shift in U.S. foreign policy and had far-reaching implications for the region and the world.
The travel vouches are being offered to medical professionals who have been on the front lines since the coronavirus pandemic began.

As the country’s healthcare professionals, particularly nurses, doctors and laboratory technicians, have been at the forefront of the fight against coronavirus in the past two months, and they have been exhausted and run out of strength, the society wrote in a letter on Saturday.

The Islamic Republic plans to increase the number of tourism arrivals from 4.8 million in 2014 to 20 million by 2025 thanks to its numerous tourist spots, including 24 ones being placed on the UNESCO World Heritage list.

A draft of eleven qanats has been collectively inscribed on the UNESCO World Heritage list under the title of Persian Qanat. Each of them epitomizes many in terms of geographic scopes, architectural designs and other motifs. Such subterranean tunnels provide exceptional testimony to traditional arts, traditions and civilizations in desert areas with an arid climate.

Generally, each qanat comprises an alluvial fan, into which a mother well is sunk to the appropriate level of the aquifer. UNESCO has listed the “Qanats provide exceptional testimony to cultural traditions and civilizations in desert areas with an arid climate.”

The Islamic Republic has proposed tourism minister Ali-Asghar Mousavi to provide medical professionals with travel vouchers after the coronavirus pandemic ends.

“Words Alone Will Not Save Jobs”: UNWTO calls for action to support tourism recovery

UNWTO has also announced that it aims to address the Tourism Ministers of the G20 countries as part of an immediate response to the challenges facing the travel and tourism sector as a result of the COVID-19 outbreak and accelerate the process of recovery.

New research from UNWTO has found that 96% of all worldwide destinations have introduced travel restrictions since January 2020 in response to the COVID-19 pandemic. The report also looked at the level of travel restrictions from country-to-country. The UNWTO has invited potential tourists to submit videos on how they think that the tourism sector will change after the COVID-19.

Iran taking final step toward malaria elimination

Referring to the use of anti-malaria drugs for COVID-19 treatment, he said that in many hospitals, anti-malaria drugs are used to treat COVID-19 cases. China has found that chloroquine, one of the world’s oldest anti-malaria drugs, appears to have an effect on the entry of coronavirus into lung cells. In addition, chloroquine is currently being used to treat COVID-19 patients, and other drugs, such as hydroxychloroquine, are being used as well.

While there is no link between AIDS and malaria, a common route of transmission of malaria is through the use of mosquitoes. The main routes of transmission are through infected mosquitoes and non-native cases, especially in the provinces of Sistan-Baluchestan, Hormozgan and the south and southeast. These areas are actively involved in disease transmission due to the incidence of malaria in Iran, of which there are no endemic cases.

In recent years, malaria symptoms were mainly fever or febrile, but the situation is changing, with a rise in the number of pregnant women with malaria.

Unfortunately, there have been cases of malaria in Iran, especially in the north and south, but they are very rare. Patients in Iran are advised to observe precautions against malaria disease from outside the borders. Moreover, the government has warned travelers to Pakistan and Afghanistan, and the other five percent of Iranians who have contracted the disease while traveling to those countries.

The main route of transmission of malaria is through the bite of the female Anopheles mosquito. There are about six species of Anopheles mosquitoes in Iran, of which there are more than two or three species, which are actively involved in disease transmission in the production of malaria, and the rest are in the north of the Zagros, from which we do not have malaria cases.

He concluded that although the most common route of transmission of malaria is mosquito bites, in rare cases there is a possibility of transmission through sexual sharing and other drug use.

According to WHO’s 2017 malaria report, the incidence rate of malaria in Iran has decreased significantly from 12,000,000 in 2010 to 57,000 in 2017.

Venezuela seeking Iran’s experience in fighting coronavirus

Location: TEHRAN – The Venezuelan deputy health minister, Maria Garcia Carvajal said her country is seeking to use Iran’s successful experiences in dealing with the coronavirus pandemic, IRNA reported on Sunday.

Carvajal made the remarks in an online meeting with her counterpart Mohsen Lari at IRNA.

After a telephone conversation between the perspectives of the two countries about experiences in combating the disease, the two sides exchanged the latest information about the measures taken to counter the coronavirus outbreak.

The two countries discussed the severity of the outbreak and the isolated action imposed by the United States on both. The Iranian official, who provided explanations about the management of the disease in the form of the national heads-quarters for coronavirus management and related committees across the country, the strengthening and launching dietary laboratories, national centers for social distancing, the application, as well as the self-diagnostic screening and other actions taken by the people’s health status.

The Venezuelan official for her part put forward the action of her country with the virus, the establishing of laboratories and employing of several laboratories and implementing the screening plan and setting up of virtual consultation system, and called for more cooperation between the two countries.

Iranian Health Minister Saeed Namaki has welcomed the measures taken by the Venezuelan authorities which can be successful in fighting the disease.

Both sides stressed their desire for having a child.

The Venezuelan president, who is seeking to use Iran’s successful experiences in combating the disease, has already expressed his wish to have a child.

The Iranian Health Ministry on Sunday announced that since the beginning of the month, about 23,000 people diagnosed with the coronavirus have recovered.

Where to find the Dutch in the world

Here are some of these rituals, which are done by Iranians in different parts of the country to celebrate the holy month of Ramadan:

Wishing Ramadan in Mazandaran

People in the northern province of Mazandaran welcome the holy month of Ramadan by gathering to pray for health, love and friendship before the beginning of the month. They begin to fast from the last days of the Islamic month of Sha’ban, which is one month before the start of the Islamic month of Muharram, and the Muslims do not eat or drink anything, and perform all the prayers after the midnight prayer.

They attend their first fast of the month and keep the last day of January for the New Year, when they pay respect and respect the holy month of Ramadan.

A bag of blessing in East Azerbaijan

On the last Friday of Ramadan, people in the city of Tabriz used to carry a bag of seeds to the mosque for their wishes to come true. Known as ‘Bombeh-Albeadi’, the ceremony is attended by young girls who wish to get married and informable couples wish for having a child.

Young women also saw the first flower of their future children in the mosque on this day by declaring that it brings happiness and luck to them.

Ya Ramadan ritual by Turksmen

Turksmen who live in northeastern parts of the country hold several rituals during the holy month of Ramadan. One of them is called ‘Ya Ramazán’, originally ‘Yari Ramazán’, which literally means ‘half of Ramadan’.

On the 14th and 21st nights of Ramadan, a dreamyman or an elderly man accompanied by a group of men walk along alleys and streets of the city or village and sing a song about ‘Ya Ramazán’ and rhyme the first four lines of the poem during the first two weeks of the month and encourage them to fast for the two remaining weeks of the month.

They go door to door and ask for money that they can help the poor and also pay respect to the door, wish them ‘Allah Hak’. They share the collected items for poor people.

Jomh-e-Albeadi in Shiraz

On the last day of Ramadan, people in Shiraz gather together and sew a bag for their family. They sew the bag on the last day of Ramadan and keep it until the last day of the month.

Yazd’s Albeadi in Shiraz

A group of people in Yazd province of Iran hold a ceremony on the last day of Ramadan in which a large group of people gather together and sew a bag for their family.

Spain’s daily coronavirus death toll drops to lowest in a month

Spain’s daily coronavirus death toll dropped to 208 Sunday, the lowest since March 21, as the country ceased to allow children outside for the first time in six weeks.

The health ministry said the figure dropped from 318 Saturday and brought Spain’s total to 23,450, the third highest number of deaths after the United States and Italy.

The news came as the country took the first steps to ease one of the world’s toughest lockdowns.

Spain issued a stringent stay-at-home order on March 14, confining the country’s nearly 47 million population to their homes in a bid to slow the spread of the pandemic.

Unlike other countries in Europe and the rest of the world, Spain’s children have not been able to go out, with only adults allowed to leave the house to buy food, medicine, or walk the dog or to play a game of basketball.

However from Sunday, under-14s can go out once a day, for one hour between 9:00 am (0700 GMT) and 9:00 pm, accompanied by one parent — and no further than one kilometer from their home.

All Spaniards will be allowed out to exercise and to take walks from next weekend, Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez said Saturday.

Cuba sends doctors to South Africa to combat coronavirus

Cuba sent 204 healthcare workers to South Africa on Saturday, the latest of more than 20 medical brigades it has sent worldwide in a bid to help countries hit by the pandemic achieve and maintain ‘zero covid.’

As the world mulls Kim Jong Un’s health, with some suggesting that the health crisis has finally forced the hermit kingdom to relax its grip on its leaders, signs continue to be fueld by reports of Kim’s alleged heart surgery and his disappearance from public view.

In an article published by China Media Group (CMG) on Monday, the newspaper said the Chinese foreign ministry had been in an attempt to cover up that the death of Kim was an error in handling the coronavirus outbreak.

“The coronavirus situation in the United States becomes increasingly grave, certain US cities are in the state of emergency, and the US government is negative for every new data. This came after a number of US states filed a lawsuit in the Supreme Court, alleging that China’s mishandling of the coronavirus outbreak has led to devastating economic losses for the states.”

“I think the politicians who have undermined public interest with their unethical behaviour that should be punished by the international community.”

Argentina’s President Alberto Fernandez has also raised the possibility of a US-China trade war.

According to the article, China has not yet filed any lawsuit against Argentina, which was one of the countries that had complained about the China’s handling of the coronavirus pandemic.

The coronavirus, which causes a respiratory illness known as COVID-19, has infected more than 3.6 million people worldwide, with more than 100,000 deaths. It originated in Wuhan, a city in central China, in December.

The number of new cases has declined in recent days, but the virus continues to spread at different rates across the world, with some countries reporting a rise in cases.

The World Health Organization (WHO) has stated that the virus has spread to more than 200 countries and territories, and has declared a pandemic.

On Saturday, the country posted 28 new cases, bringing the total to 1,971. In the past 24 hours, 9 patients have recovered, bringing the total number of recoveries to 30.

In South Africa, the number of deaths has decreased to 1,206, while the number of recoveries has increased to 9,354.

The country has a special relationship with Cuba, which has a long history of providing medical aid to other countries, particularly in Africa, where it has often treated patients with HIV and AIDS.

Cuba has a well-developed health care system, with a strong emphasis on preventive medicine and public health education.

The government has implemented comprehensive programs to combat diseases such as tuberculosis, malaria, and HIV/AIDS, and has made significant progress in reducing maternal and child mortality.

Cuba has also played a key role in the fight against global pandemics, including the COVID-19 crisis. The country has sent medical teams to help with the pandemic response.

Cuba has been praised for its efforts to control the pandemic, including its use of vaccines and other medical interventions.

On the domestic front, Cuba has implemented strict measures to control the spread of COVID-19, including the closure of borders and the implementation of quarantine measures for travelers.

However, the government has also faced criticism for its handling of the pandemic, including reports of shortages of medical supplies and the inadequate testing capacity.

Despite these challenges, Cuba has managed to keep its COVID-19 cases and deaths relatively low compared to other countries.

The government has also been praised for its response to the pandemic, including the donation of vaccines and other medical supplies to other countries.

On the international front, Cuba has been a strong proponent of international cooperation in the fight against COVID-19, including the World Health Organization (WHO) and other international health organizations.

The country has also been a leader in the development and production of vaccines, including the Sputnik V vaccine.

Cuba has been recognized for its efforts in the Global Health Security Index, which measures countries’ preparedness for pandemics.

Cuba has consistently scored high in this index, demonstrating its commitment to public health and international cooperation.

Overall, Cuba’s response to the COVID-19 pandemic has been praised for its effectiveness and its commitment to public health.

However, the country has also faced challenges, including the lack of access to vaccines and other medical supplies, and the need for continued improvement in its healthcare system.

Cuba’s success in controlling the pandemic has been attributed to its strong public health system, its ability to mobilize its population, and its commitment to international cooperation.

Cuba has also been praised for its efforts to support other countries in the fight against COVID-19, including the provision of medical assistance and the donation of vaccines.

The International Olympic Committee, jointly with loral organizers, has been forced to delay the 2020 Tokyo Olympics by one year to 2021 due to the COV-19 outbreak. But Drut, an IOC member since 1996, argued that postponement of a major event is just the tip of the iceberg. "The consequences of this crisis have just begun, and almost all postponement dates, without the Games model – both economic and organizational – will be deeply affected," asked the 63-year-old, who serves as a member of the French football federation between 2004-17. Under Blaise Chine, "The beautiful project that we built and carried in the bid phase for Paris 2024 is now outdated, out of touch with reality. "The project is in a completely new context. We have to review its means and reviews on the essential. "This first necessity is to be a turning point, to some extent, to sort out the situation. Under normal circumstances, the FIFA's financial aid to member associations, including Iran, would have received the full amount of the contribution under the 2019-2020 cycle. Instead, FIFA is now transferring this amount as an additional support to its member associations across all member associations. Currently, this means that FIFA will release USD 500,000 to each member association in a consultation or in a context or in a new context. There are two ambiguities as to how the Iranian Football Federation will be able to receive financial assistance from FIFA, as the broad U.S. sanctions on Iran's banking system remain. However, the Iranian Football Federation still has the right to receive financial aid from FIFA due to sanctions. And FIFA has not yet found a safe solution to get the revenues of Iranian football and think of the problem with this financial assistance remains the "Many efforts have been made in this regard, but we have not reached a suitable solution," Drut said. This immediate financial assistance should be used to mitigate the financial impact of COVID-19 on football in member associations, namely to meet financial or operational obligations that they may have towards staff and other third parties. The standard obligations and responsibilities in relation to the use of these funds outlined in the Forward-20 Regulations remain fully applicable and will be subject to the standard audit and reporting process. The 2020 Asian Men's Clubs Volleyball Championship will be held in August in Nakhon Ratchasima, Thailand. The biennial tournament was due to take place from April 18 to 25, but was postponed due to the grave COVID-19 concerns and rescheduled for August 30 to September 6.

If things are going satisfactorily and life gets back to normal, it is likely that the first AFC Championship this year will be the Asian Men's Clubs Volleyball Championship in Nakhon Ratchasima. The championship, an international volleyball competition in Asia and Oceania contested by the men's clubs of the AFC's affiliated members, would have dated back to 1999 when the AFC and FIVB co-hosted the first championship. Since then, two host sides have taken part in the inaugural Asian Men's Club Championship in Nakhon Ratchasima in 1999 and 2001.
