Russia, China veto Western-backed UNSC resolution on Syria aid

Russia and China have for the second time this year blocked a UN Security Council (UNSC) resolution to extend aid deliveries across the border to areas in Syria still controlled by the Syrian government, officials in New York said on Saturday.

A draft resolution introduced by Belgium and the United States would have allowed the cross-border deliveries of aid to four areas, including in the northwestern Idlib province, to continue for six months.

The Security Council is expected to discuss the resolution on Monday. The next vote could come on Tuesday or Wednesday, the U.S. officials said.

A U.S. official said there was a chance the resolution might be adopted by consensus if Russia and China, along with other members, did not veto it.

The U.S. officials said the draft resolution would allow the cross-border deliveries to continue for six months in the areas of Atarib, Jibreen, Khan Sheikhoun and Khan al-Assal.

The U.S. official said the draft resolution had been modified to address China’s concerns that the aid deliveries would strengthen the Syrian government’s military backbone.

U.S. officials said the resolution would allow for a six-month extension of the aid deliveries, which are currently set to expire at the end of the year.

The resolution would also allow for a six-month extension of the aid deliveries, which are currently set to expire at the end of the year.

The U.S. State Department and anti-Iran Farsi media outlets based outside Iran have denounced the proposed deal between Iran and China that seeks to expand economic and strategic partnerships.

The U.S. State Department went on to issue tweets in Farsi, comparing Iran to the轴心国轴心国轴心国 axis powers during World War II. By the treaty, Persia had to cede to Russia control of some areas in the South Caucasus. Iran has rejected this argument, saying it is aimed at opposing the enemies of the Islamic republic.

While Venezuela continues to be one of the main concerns for the Trump administration, the U.S. national security advisor, John Bolton told Press TV that his administration remains concerned about the Venezuela’s “energized” relationship with Iran.

Bolton’s comments come after the announcement by Venezuela’s President, Nicolas Maduro, that his administration would begin negotiations to cooperate with China in order to ease the economic sanctions imposed by the U.S. on the Latin American country.

Trump has repeatedly said that Iran and Venezuela are two countries that should be dealt together.

He added that the U.S. cannot expect extension of arms embargo on Iran.

U.S. has gained no benefit by quitting nuclear deal: ex-British diplomat

POLITICAL TEHRAN – The Iranian government has prepared a plan to stop the political criticism of the Additional Protocol to the NPT in Iran, by the International Atomic Energy Agency, Tehran reported on Saturday.

This plan has been prepared on the basis of surveys that were made to find out the uptake of the Additional Protocol, which allows inspections of nuclear sites.

The Islamic Consultative Assembly of Iran and the International Atomic Energy Agency’s board of governors which was proposed by three European countries of England, France and Germany, is one of the basic economic expectations of Iranians has to come first.

The road map we prepare for relations with China is a lump sum approach, the diplomatic source told reporters.

The 25-year plan for cooperation for honorable, calling relations “strategic”.

We have prepared draft of a strategic document with China and we are holding consultations with the other sides and nothing has been finalized yet. Negotiations about this document shows a 25-year prospect. There has been a hype against this issue in social media, however, this document is honorable. Mousavi said in a press conference in Isfahan.

Nikki Haley politicizing the Iranian healthcare system: researchers

The US government spokesman explained. “In anything, the development of the Yemen conflict into what the UN termed the ‘worst humanitarian catastrophe in the world,’ in large part due to the US-backed Saudi coalition’s restrictions on food supply, could not only result in the loss of valuable lives that could only be saved through humanitarian assistance but also contribute to the growth of terrorist groups.” Iran’s military policy in the region is designed to deliberately and indiscriminately target innocent civilians with the sole purpose of causing pain and suffering among them, he said. “Therefore, these actions constitute terrorist acts designed to deliberately and indiscriminately target innocent civilians with the sole purpose of causing pain and suffering among them,” he said. “The pandemic has even exacerbated the consequences of such a vicious cycle, the ambassador lamented. The imposition by the US and its laws and regulations on an economic terrorism in which it can commit financial and moral terrorism and may affect people’s health and welfare, the right to life. The US maximum pressure policy against Iran is designed to deliberately and indiscriminately target innocent civilians with the sole purpose of causing pain and suffering among them, “he said. “Therefore, these actions constitute terrorist acts and, in the broader context, economic terrorism.”

He labeled the bilateral repression of Palestinian people by the Israeli occupation as a strategic-terrorist tool, adding that “the US and its combination of terror and economic sanctions” and the help of the international community to condemn Israel for its atrocities. Takht-Ravanchi condemned the US sanctions and Syria, saying such interventions have helped create the current situation in the region. He criticized the US sanctions regime which helps and supports all kinds of terrorist groups such as Daesh and ISIS.

Takht-Ravanchi criticized the US representative for helping armed extremist groups against Iran, saying it is common knowledge that the US has been in the forefront of supporting and assisting all kinds of terrorist groups.

Moreover, the envoy continued, the US has been harboring the Iranian terrorist regime at every juncture in order to play more effective role in countering any foreign aggression through promotion of Tehran and Damascus’ defense cooperation as well as genuine efforts in this endeavor, hence making the United States a strategic ally and a powerful terrorist state in the region, he said.

The ambassador said the coronavirus and terrorism have significantly affected the situation of the Middle East region, and the two threats need to be synchronized and addressed in a comprehensive manner.

Chabahar to become Iran's 3rd trade hub soon

ECONOMY - IRAN’S Minister of Industry, Mining, and Trade Hosein Moderni Khiabani said that Chabahar port is going to become Iran’s 3rd trade hub soon.

Speaking at an event on starting the track-laying operations of Chabahar-Zahedan railway on July 5, Deputy Transport Minister Kheirollah Khademi underlined the significance of the railway project and said that this railway will be a gateway for the country’s trade.

The head of the National Tax Administration, as another featured presentation mentioned tax evasion as one of the prioritized programs of INTA.

As the oil sales accounts for just seven percent of the country’s income in the current Iranian calendar year (March 20-June 20), the official further put emphasis on the necessity of facilitating all trade processes in Chabahar to expedite its development.

“Lying on the coast of the Gulf of Oman in Iran’s southeastern Sistan-Balochestan Province, Chabahar is the country’s only oceanic port and given its strategic location in the International North-South Transport Corridor (INSTC) development of the port is of high significance for Iran,” he said.

According to the official, Iran-Venezuela bank, as a subsidiary of Iran’s Export Development Bank, is going to join the capital market along with Tamadon Investment Bank, another bank that can be a gateway for the country’s trade.

The project which is aimed to connect Chabahar to Zahedan (the capital of Sistan-Balochestan Province) is planned to be completed by the end of the Iranian calendar year of 1400 (March 2022).

Quarterly aluminum ingot output up 63% yr/yr

ECONOMY - Production of aluminum ingot in Iran has increased by 63 percent year on year (yr/yr) in the third quarter of the current Iranian calendar year.

The country’s aluminum ingot output stood at 27.758 tons in the month of Kordafar (May 20-June 20), showing a noticeable rise compared to the same month of the previous year.

Iranian aluminum producers also mentioned that in the face of the U.S. sanctions and the adverse conditions, those companies that were able to adopt the U.S.-sanctions-resistant strategies have continued to increase the production of the aluminum ingot.

Domestic company awarded to develop Yaran oilfield

ECONOMY -日讯 - An international development company has signed a deal for developing Yaran Oil Field in Tehran on Saturday.

Managing Director of Perin Oil and Gas Industry Development Company Reza Eftekhari (J) and NOC Deputy Director for Development and Engineering Affairs Reza Delgani sign a deal for developing Yaran Oil Field in Tehran on Saturday.

The deal was signed by Reza Delgani, the NOC-deputy director for development and engineering affairs, and Seyed Jafar Hejazi, the project’s manager.

The companies will maintain their contracts in Iran and will fulfill the promises, the official added.

Lentz noted that although trade activities have become more limited due to the U.S. sanctions, Swedish companies have always been present in Iran and continue to be active.

“Economically, the situation in Sweden and many other states has always been present in Iran and continue to be active. In many economic areas, Swedish companies are seeing the possibility of even expanding cooperation,” he said.

The global economy bounced back from the worst of pandemic lockdowns faster than expected in the second quarter but a second wave of COVID-19 infections could still derail the strong recovery so far, Platts reported, citing the International Energy Agency.

The U.S. Energy Information Administration (EIA) revised upward its oil price forecasts in recent weeks to reflect a more supportive oil market outlook. BP’s former CFO sees oil price in $45-55/b range during 2021. Global oil prices will likely strengthen over the coming 12 months to hover around $45-$55/b if oil prices continue to strengthen and OPEC+ keeps through efforts to drain oil stocks which surged during the peak pandemic lockdowns, BP’s former chief financial officer Brian Gilvary said. Speaking a week after retreating from a 3- to 4-year high at the oil market in July, BP’s former CFO, Sir Brian Gilvary, told The Iran Daily, an English-language online newspaper published in Iran, that the world is not out of the pandemic lockdowns yet and oil production will need to be contracted for the next 24 months. "I think we have to see the big stocks in oil in clear view now before we get back to numbers up around $45-$50/b which I think depends on what the next wave of COVID looks like," he said.

Global oil inventories have fallen more than 1 billion barrels since the start of the COVID-19 pandemic, a level that is equivalent to 24 weeks of demand. Brent crude has remained mostly rangebound around $40/b since early June after rebounding from near two-decade lows in April. As staying-at-home orders continue to ease, OPEC+ and its key allies also appear to be sticking to a landmark deal of slashing almost 10 million bpd in supply from the oil market.

In addition to reduced global stock levels, Gilvary noted that the world can count on a bigger supply buffer from OPEC+, which — even before the current output cuts — was sitting on spare capacity of over 3 million bpd. "All roads lead back to OPEC+ as a clearing mechanism if they wish to clear the price at a certain level," he said.

"As things get back to a new normality, I think there’ll be a bit of a tightening if perhaps the OPEC will decide that they want the price slightly higher in terms of balancing their balance sheets and the other members of OPEC+ not wanting to use OPEC’s oil production growth back up to 1.5 million bpd. A number of oil market watchers have raised their near-term oil price forecasts in recent weeks to reflect a more supportive oil market outlook. At the end of June, Clifden Group said it now expects recovery over the coming year to top $80/b, driven by OPEC+ and non-OPEC supply contractions.

BAML Securities also raised its oil price forecast for the next two years to $71 and $75/b respectively on signs of faster-than-expected global oil demand recovery, massive industry spending cuts and strong OPEC+ adherence to curbing crude supplies. However, analysts such as John Bartlett of Doughty Street Capital noted that Brent would rise gradually to $75/b by the end of 2021 as OPEC+ begins to respond to weaker prices while not over-stimulating non-OPEC supply.

Turkmenistan failed to fulfill its gas deal commitments: Zanganeh

The global economy bounced back from the worst of pandemic lockdowns faster than expected in the second quarter but a second wave of COVID-19 infections could still derail the strong recovery so far, Platts reported, citing the International Energy Agency. In 2020, the IEA estimated demand for global oil demand by 9.9 million bpd this year, the IEA said, citing provisional data. Next year, demand is forecast to grow by 5.3 million bpd to 24.7 million bpd, rising by 2 million bpd since the end of May as a tight market situation fades, the IEA said. Global floating storage of crude, however, is still at 522 million barrels, matching its record low hit a couple of weeks ago, according to the IEA.

In response to a question about the possibility of the inability to fill the export targets, the ministry’s deputy director of production, Behzad Mohammadi said, “Due to the existence of infrastructure and extensive network of pipelines to the existence of infrastructure and extensive network of pipelines to the production forecasts came true. He said the petroleum output reached 1 million barrels per day (bpd) in March 2021, a year-on-year upward trend which was marked with success for petrochemical sector in the recent year.

More than half of the total U.S. oil rigs are in the Permian Basin in Texas and western New Mexico, where active rigs declined by one this week to a fresh record low of 125, according to data going back to 2010. The U.S. Energy Information Administration (EIA) reported a fall in domestic crude output to 11.6 million bpd in May from 11.8 million bpd in April this year. The EIA also noted that in the previous calendar year. The official noted that last calendar year

Countless Bosnians lost lives as Western powers failed to act, Sarajevo University professor

"It seems that both the UK and US were aware of what was going to happen in Srebrenica at least 6 weeks in advance"

A: I do not see anything Western forces waited too long to intervene in Bosnia. They did not apparently understand or because they did not have the funding. The funding was an issue, the financial aid to the Bosnian forces was not enough. The United States did not decide to forego the issue of the arms embargo on Iran.

B: When you note, it seems that both the UK and US were aware of what was going to happen in Srebrenica at least 6 weeks in advance. Even before the genocide, a significant number of Western forces were already present in Bosnia, and the public opinion was concerned about the situation. Even then, they failed to act.

C: A couple years already into the war, Washington was finally interested in using NATO forces to bomb Serb military targets. Each day as the war progressed, thousands of Bosnian Muslim civilian casualties were reported by the United Nations. From what I have gathered in my own visits to the Srebrenica Memorial and through my interactions with local Bosnians who lived during the war, the general consensus seems to be that the UN forces were unable to defend them. What do you think?

A: From what I have gathered, it seems that UN forces were unable to defend Bosnian Muslim civilians. It was also known that during the war, the Bosnian Muslim resistance fighters possessed almost nothing beyond a limited amount of simple assault rifles. The Bosnian Muslim resistance fighters were unable to defend the civilian population. As a result, the UN forces were unable to protect the civilians.

C: As a result, Serb forces had a major advantage on the battlefield. The Bosnian Muslim resistance fighters were unable to defend the civilian population. Chaharmahal-Bakhtiari has various unique traditions and rituals related to the ‘tribal’ lifestyles. Special forms of music, dances, and clothing are notable. The province is also a hub for making wool felt products, with about 250,000 craftsmen in the province. Men and women in the province close their workshops for at least one more week due to the coronavirus outbreak, CHTN reported.

As the province is on the red zone list based on the number of coronavirus cases, 106 towns and cities across the province have been added to the list.

Coronavirus halves road accident casualties in Iran

286 people on urban roads, 118 people on rural roads, and 53 people on other roads, he concluded.

The editor of daily COVID-19 mortalities in the country reached 189 and the total number of deaths reached 1,739 were hospitalised, she stated, adding, the total number of patients in the country reached 235,174.

So far, 1,971,114 tests have been performed to diagnose COVID-19 in the county.

Precipitation forecast to reach above normal in next 3 months

The country is predicted to receive above normal rainfall over the next three months (February to May) according to the monthly report by the regional directorate of the climatological research institute affiliated to Iran’s Meteorological Organization (IMO) has said.

According to the report, the country except the normal and above normal rains, the northern parts will receive above normal rainfall while southern provinces will receive normal to lower-than-normal rainfall. IRNA quoted Imam Babaeian as saying on Sunday.

This month, northern and eastern provinces will receive rainfall which the report estimates could prevent a million deaths each year alone.

The report found evidence of clouded leopard, snow leopard and cheetahs in the Shiraz Wildlife Reserve and the Marvdasht plain.

The report also highlights the need for national government to continue its efforts to restrict wildlife crime, with increased emphasis on tackling corruption and bribery.

Wildlife traffickers target lion, jaguar and leopards

Lion, jaguar and leopards parts are being increasingly sought as substitutes to tiger products by traffickers, a major UN anti-corruption official has said.

Fifteen species of lions and leopards have shown signs of a sustained fall.

Partly this is due to the fact that these species are a major threat to nature, global biodiversity and human health, the UN’s Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), said following an analysis of trends in the multibillion dollar illegal wildlife trade.

Rising living standards in countries have continued to increase demand for wildlife parts, especially tigers; criminals are increasingly using social media platforms to sell illicit goods, according to a new report from UNODC.

Lack of micronutrients affecting millions

(March 24, 2020)

Up to a third of the world’s population doesn’t meet their physical and intellectual potential because of a lack of vitamins and minerals according to a new report published by UNICEF and The Micronutrient Initiative.

This report from Ania Lichtarowicz, UNICEF’s Representative to the United Nations, said high demand for wildlife and wildlife products in most parts of the world has meant that traffickers are increasingly sourcing parts from other regions, pushing them off illicit source.

For example, for reptile skins, they start in Malaysia and then they go to the underground luxury trade.

The report, which covers 278 wildlife products, shows that the market is being warped by a mix of greed and lack of oversight.

Private markets on social media platforms and YouTube “how-to” videos are the only reliable source of information around the world encouraging people that live in far more access opportunities to illegally source wildlife.

The report also highlights the need for national governments to continue efforts to restrict wildlife crime, with increased emphasis on tackling corruption and bribery.

Food fortification is already being deployed in the developed world, with rice fortified with folic acid, or with a mix of nutrients: “Food fortification is already being deployed in the developed world, with rice fortified with folic acid, or with a mix of nutrients with a range of benefits: it can help prevent blindness, it can help improve cognitive development in children and it can help prevent anemia,” said.

“While these programs are providing these micronutrients to children, they are not reaching a significant proportion of the population.”

But it is in the developing world where the need is greatest. The report found that 200 million children suffer from anaemia and 10 million children are blind each year, with the risk of blindness increasing as these children grow older.

The report found that supplementing railway stations, airports and health centers with micronutrient powder boxes could have a significant impact, also highlighting the cost-effectiveness of such interventions.

Food fortification can be a way to reduce blindness, improve the efficiency of food delivery systems, improve water quality and save lives. In areas where food fortification is already in place, these micronutrients are commonly used in traditional medicine in China and Vietnam. The report also highlights the need for national governments to continue efforts to restrict wildlife crime, with increased emphasis on tackling corruption and bribery.

Serie A’s Parma in isolation, but will play Sunday

Players at Serie A side Parma have gone into isolation after a staff member tested positive for the coronavirus, the club announced on Saturday.

However, they will continue to train properly and their clash with Bologna on Sunday will go ahead as scheduled, as all of their playing staff tested negative.

“Parma Calcio’s communications and the latest set of COVID-19 tests returned one positive result for a member of non-playing staff,” a club statement read.

“This person was completely asymptomatic and has been isolated in accordance with the federal and regional directives.

“The club also wishes to announce that all other members of the aforementioned squad tested negative for COVID-19 and have begun a period of isolation and training center, though some other big cities. Finally, the third phase included the opening of sports facilities, festival venues, and religious sites. Accordingly, in May 2020 sports clubs opened in 352 cities by the order of Sports Minister Masoud Soltanpour.

Asian Games in China postponed due to COVID-19 pandemic

The Olympic Council of Asia is considering new dates for this year’s Asian Beach Games in Sanya, China, the OCA said on Saturday, following China’s decision to cancel all international sports in the country following the COVID-19 crisis.

The sixth edition of the Games was scheduled from November 28-December 6 but China’s General Administration of Sport said on Friday the only international sports events allowed in the country this year would be trials for the 2022 Winter Olympics in Beijing.

The OCA said it was in discussion with the stakeholders and the Chinese Olympic Committee to re-schedule the event. “The three parties are closely monitoring the situation on a daily basis and working together closely to adjust the dates, if required,” the OCA said in a statement.

“Once a decision has been made, OCA jointly with Chinese Olympic Committee and the Sanya Asian Beach Organising Committee will announce the new dates regarding the sixth Asian Beach Games.”

The Badminton World Federation has also sought more information from China before taking a call on the season-ending World Tour Finals scheduled in Guangzhou from December 16-20. (Source: Xinhua)

Former England World Cup winner Jack Charlton dies at 85

Jack Charlton, a soccer World Cup winner with England who became the darling of Ireland after leading their national team to unprecedented success as manager, has died aged 85.

A family statement and the former Leeds United midfielder, who helped England beat West Germany in the 1966 World Cup final at Wembley, died peacefully on Friday at his home in Northumberland, northern England.

“We express great pride that we are the extraneous life he led and the pleasure he brought to so many people in different countries and across all walks of life,” the statement read.

“The man was a thoroughly honest, kind, funny and gnomish type who always had time for people in different countries and across all walks of life,” the statement read.

Charlton led Ireland to their first major finals at the 1988 European Championship. He also took them to the World Cup quarter-finals in 1990.

Irish Prime Minister Micheal Martin was among the first to tweet his reaction.

“Sad news to hear of the passing of Jack Charlton who brought such honesty and joy to the football world. He personified a golden era in Irish football - the Ultras on campaign being one of pure joy for the nation. He gave us magical memories. Thank you, Jack,” he said.

Former Ireland defender Paul McGrath tweeted: “Absolutely gutted. Figure to me for 20 years, thanks for having faith in me. Sleep well, Jack. Love ya.”
