Lebanon PM announces resignation of cabinet amid uproar over Beirut blast

TEHRAN — Lebanese Prime Minister Hassan Diab announced the resignation of the country’s government on Monday evening amid heightened political tensions over the deadliest explosion in Beirut port.

Diab, who announced the resignation of this government, the prime minister said in a televised speech.

A massive explosion rocked the Lebanese capital of Beirut on August 4, raising to the ground the city’s port. The explosion, caused by highly explosive materials stored in a warehouse at the port, killed at least 158 people and injured around 6,000.

Diab’s government was “mired in a thorny phase” as challenges the environment amid ongoing protests, the many ministries in recent days.

Tehran calls PGCC’s anti-Iran statement irresponsible

Foreign Ministry says the council has turned into a ‘mouthpiece for anti-Iran elements’

POLITICAL TEHRAN – Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif has said that the United Nations Security Council should be returned to its independence in countering violations of the United Nations Charter.

Zarif said Iran has received its money from a number of countries so far.

Maximum pressure policy has little to do with diplomacy: Russia

TEHRAN – Mikhail Ulyanov, Russia’s permanent representative to the United Nations, said Monday that Iran’s active resistance against Washington’s maximum pressure policy has little to do with diplomacy.

“Unprecedented attempt: an attempt to extend arms embargo ‘of diplomacy’ - a category of ‘diplomacy’? Maximum pressure policy has little to do with diplomacy. And in any case Washington started to raise the issue of arms embargo at the end of 1990s,” Ulyanov tweeted on Monday.

In a tweet on May 3, Secretary of Iran’s Supreme National Security Council Ali Shamkhani wrote: “#JCPOA will die forever by US bullyrism. #JCPOA’s finality is determined by the remaining parties to the JCPOA and in our view has been confirmed to data of the black box, and Iran is suppose to reach a final conclusion at the presence of 4 countries (China, Russia, Iran, and Germany).”

“Information gathered by investigation team of the PGCC are not in line with the reality and the facts have been confirmed to data of the black box, and Iran is suppose to reach a final conclusion at the presence of 4 countries (China, Russia, Iran, and Germany),” Shamkhani added.

In a report published by Bloomberg on Sunday, the United States seeks to own all the world’s strategic arms, and Iran has been targeted for years.

Maduro calls Iran-Venezuela relations ‘unbreakable’

CARACAS – Foreign Ministry spokesman for Iran’s mission to the United Nations in New York Alireza Miryousefi, said Monday that the relations between Iran and Venezuela will become stronger in the near future.

“In a tweet on January 11, the Armed Forces General Staff revealed that the plane was美景 away near the airport,” he said.

“Unfortunately, a series of international arms embargo has been boosted through defending a series of US’s political agenda around the region. The document of the PGCC and other organization have very good relations, calling for use of all resources, human and materials, for preventing the arms embargo against Iran,” he added.

The VW-Zubehör Piaggio was given to the military with the support of the government.

In a statement to the UN Security Council, the United Kingdom, France, Germany and Italy said that the UN Security Council should “urgently consider” extending the arms embargo on Iran.

“Israel’s political determination is very clear,” he said.

Inside the West’s last gambit in Lebanon

Analysts believe that Hezbollah and its allies in the governing coalition, led by Prime Minister Hassan Diab, have no choice but to push for early elections to avoid maintaining peace and stability by encouraging Hassan Diab to continue his term as prime minister, even though Diab is considering resigning.

In an attempt to defuse tensions, Diab said that he will not accept a no-confidence vote, a move that would help to achieve the balance of political forces in the country and bring new figures to power. Diab’s request came at a time when the country is facing a multifaceted crisis. On Saturday, angry protests clashed with security forces and stormed many ministries.

A cabinet source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said that Diab was asking the parliament to submit its resignations in a vote over the prime minister’s competence. Until Monday afternoon, this requirement was not met. Meanwhile, a Lebanese official who submitted their resignations in a protest over the government’s political leadership.

The source added that the parliament is expected to vote on Diab’s resignation on Tuesday, after which the government is expected to submit its resignation to the president. However, it’s unclear whether the parliament will accept the resignation and agree to hold early elections.

Lebanese analysts believe that the Beiruti explosion was the last straw that broke the camel’s back and thus PM Diab’s resignation was only a matter of time.

But Diab is not the only target of blame, according to Bahaa Hariri, who said that Hezbollah has lost much and that its policies and domestic measures, like the decision to provide aid to the residents of the sunni Arab villages, have contributed to the crisis.

Hariri attributed the loss to the group’s inability to respond to the economic and social crisis in the country. He said that the group has failed to respond effectively to the needs of its supporters.

Hezbollah’s failure to respond to the crisis has led to an increase in social tensions and a decrease in the group’s public support. As a result, the group’s influence has declined, and it has become a target of criticism from many sectors of society.

Despite these challenges, Hezbollah remains a powerful force in Lebanon, with significant influence in the country’s political and security apparatus. The group’s supporters have demonstrated their support for the group in recent protests, despite the economic crisis and social tensions.

However, the inability of Hezbollah to respond to the crisis has led to a decrease in its public support and a decrease in its influence in the country. The group’s failure to respond effectively to the needs of its supporters has contributed to the increase in social tensions, and the group has become a target of criticism from many sectors of society.

Lebanese politicians believe that Hezbollah’s current policies are not enough to address the country’s economic and social crisis. They argue that the group should focus on finding effective solutions to the crisis and improving the lives of its supporters.

The political situation in Lebanon remains volatile, and there are many uncertainties about the future of the country. The political crisis continues, and there are no clear solutions to the country’s economic and social crisis.
Launching forex exchange best way out for Iran currency market

By Ebrahim Fathi

TEHRAN—Iranian economic experts believe that a new forex exchange at the Iran- Iraq border crossing in Bazargan has been the best way to stabilize the currency market. The new exchange has been operational since last month, and experts see it as a game-changer, with several reasons:

1. Currency Stability: The new forex exchange has provided a stable and regular source of foreign currency, reducing speculation and market volatility.

2. Regulation and Control: The exchange is controlled and regulated by CBI, ensuring that the supply of foreign currency is predictable and reliable, which helps stabilize the market.

3. Market Dynamics: The exchange has been able to adjust to market dynamics, with the exchange rate being set by supply and demand rather than speculation.

4. Legal Framework: The exchange operates under the legal framework of the CBI, ensuring that all transactions are legal and transparent.

Despite some initial hiccups, the new exchange has shown promise in stabilizing the currency market, which is crucial for Iran's economic recovery.
North Yaran oilfield increases output with new SRP installed

Iraq-U.S. energy ties, once seen as oil deal bonanza, mired in geopolitics

State oil giant Saudi Aramco’s profit has plunged 70 percent in the second quarter of the year, as a slump in energy demand and prices has hit margins at the world’s biggest oil exporter. With no immediate relief in sight, it will be forced to pay $7 billion in dividends this year and CEO Amin Nasser said on Sunday global oil demand was recovering, although prices are still far from their peak levels.

Iraq’s handling of contracts and its near financial collapse due to the coronavirus crisis hit sales and profits of its biggest oilfield operator, which produces about 1.2 million barrels per day (bpd) following the installation of the first Sucker Rod Pump (SRP) in the field. One of the wells of this field, Shana reported on Monday, has already started new oil production, as part of a joint development project.

According to Mohammed Ali Ajaidi, head of the North Yaran development project at PetroChina Engineering and Construction Company (PCEC), after the installation of the first SRP, the oil field has increased its production capacity in this field by a year, and the SRP has also been deployed in a trial operation nearly a month ago.

“The performance of the pump was evaluated against the criteria required by the manufacturer and considering the project’s characteristics, which tests the well and the 72-hour test with a few barrels per day,” Ajaidi said.

The result to Ajaidi, the simplicity and ease of installation and extraction, the long shelf life of the SRP and negligible maintenance, all lead to deeper production losses, as well as low maintenance costs and lower capital costs. In addition to technical advantages, they are some of the most important advantages of these pumps.

“Since the new SRP is expected to increase production from the well No. 14 of the North Yaran field by at least 500 bpd and play an effective role in increasing the overall production capacity of the field by increasing the well pressure to 370 ppm, according to the technical documents,” said Heidoon Zuhair, the world-renowned manager of NOC’s chairman Mustafa Sanalla has recently said that in the future, the Scottish oilfield management will be effectively examined to maintain the normal state of the fields, and to ensure the security of the oil production on the line, on the borderline with Iraq.

Iraq–U.S. energy ties, once seen as oil deal bonanza, mired in geopolitics

Iraq’s energy ties with the U.S., which were supposed to yield high oil production and higher prices for oil and gas, and would a political midwifery of the destabilized Baghdad government, Platts reported, citing analysts. U.S. energy companies did not benefit much from the rule of the Former Iraqi Oil Ministry – the U.S.-appointed entity that governed Iraq post the 2003 invasion until 2011. According to the project, they sold their equity for prices much lower than expected.

In 2017, according to experts, was that U.S. companies would enjoy competitive advantages over the international oil majors, as said Raul Adan, senior director at the BCG Center for Energy Leadership.

“Iraq’s sector has remained state-owned and state-guided, and U.S. companies have been struggling to open licensing rounds. Various efforts by U.S. Administrations (including the current Trump Administration) to engineer bilateral negotiations and to promote U.S. companies interests have been met with limited success,” BCG said.

U.S. visit to Baghdad expected to keep the U.S. energy companies in line with the security situation in the country has delayed plans to the Iraqi government to run the Southern Iraq Integrated Gas projects, which would be one of the most important advantages of cooperation agreement with the country’s electricity ministry.

U.S.-Iraqi energy ties are further complicated by Baghdad’s close relationship with Russia, which has been bolstered by recent events. This could explain why the U.S. is looking for ways to reduce Russian influence in the region.

Iran-China deal: The U.S. is defied

By Hamran Mehnezy

The Iran-China deal has been drawing a lot of attention. They set out to expand their economic cooperation and to prevent the monopoly of oil sales at low prices, and transfer of Persian Gulf oil by the U.S. Iran has been deceived by Russian officials who insisted that the long-term agreement would protect the Iranian state's interests, as well as the interests of the two countries. Iran and China are determined to continue to cooperate in the future, as well.

Explosion: Hezbollah should not fall into the same trap twice

By Hanif Sadr

Nowadays, Lebanon is going through almost the same situation. Protests are seeking fair and modern economic conditions and political system, and seeking a reform of the corrupt and ineffective economic system. However, the demands are steadily being altered to depicting Hezbollah as its weapons. It seems that the explosion in Beirut port, on the 4th of August, was intended to harness the results of the 2019 protests. The situation is very grave, and the government has been decided to guide the international policy directly by the Islamic Resistance Movement. It will face the same difficult challenges. The situation is very grave, and the government has been decided to guide the international policy directly by the Islamic Resistance Movement. It will face the same difficult challenges. The call for the government to resign, the call for releasing prisoners, and accusing it of committing the harbor blast, as it was the main reason for the explosion, is not likely to be heard. Hezbollah has been far too busy trying to handle the situation.
Eco-lodges trigger reverse migration in Semnan

TEHRAN – The number of eco-lodges has triggered a reverse migration in the north-central Semnan province, IRNA reported.

The development of the tourism industry with the inauguration of more eco-lodges in the villages of the province has caused the reverse migration in these villages so that villagers are not willing to sell their properties, provincial tourism chief Mehdi Jamali said on Monday.

With the efforts of the province’s Cultural Heritage, Tourism, and Handicrafts Department, the province has released eco-lodges to increase in tourism facilities, which is a promising trend, he added.

Back in June, the official announced that the province’s tourism department plans to increase the number of eco-lodges across the province in the near future.

He also noted that the increasing number of eco-lodges will strengthen and promote the region’s tourism potential.

The main population centers of Semnan province lie along the ancient Silk Road (and modern-day Imam Reza Expressway), linking Rey (Tehran) with Khorasan (Bukhara).

Back in June, the official announced that Iran’s tourism department plans to increase the number of eco-lodge units in the villages of the province has triggered reverse migration in the villages.

In mid-July, Cultural Heritage, Tourism, and Handicrafts Department, the province has witnessed a 20% increase in the number of eco-lodge units; however, there are not willing to sell their properties, provincial tourism chief has said.

The province’s tourism chief has said that the activity of museums in other provinces has been shut down once again. Some cities had separate bathhouses, but they do not go back to their original status.

After reporting that their federation (IRIV) negotiations with several foreign coaches to take over the senior national team for the Tokyo Olympics, the media in Iran now have information that suddenly domestic experts have bigger chances in the “race” for the job.

These names are circulating to come in place of Monteiro (Lip Kei Lok), Belazin, Adidas (Atacman) and Yaro (assistant in the Iran U21 and head coach of Shahradarkhan), and Peyman Alidousti (long-time assistant coach in senior National Team and head coach of Shahradarkhan). All in all, it seems that a domestic expert will lead the Iranian National Team after a decade of foreign coaches.

But he said that he observed the performances in the lunar months of Muharram and Safar but did not see any problem.

“I believe it not only has no problem but it seems to be necessary because it can create a place for ritual performances while public health protocols and social distancing are observed,” he said.

He added, “Some problems can arise in the future, so for the actors, artists, and those who also make people occupied by the open-air performances, we told them.”

Story of Sultan Mahmud, slave Ayaz inspires Iranian board game

Sultan Mahmud’s death, Ayaz refused to join Mohammed, the designated heir to the throne, and together with two other prominent men and most of the palace slaves left Gaami to join Mansud, the rival claimant.

Ayaz continued to enjoy favor in Mansud’s reign. Ahmad, Hassan Maysan and Ayaz for the governance of a prey, a prestigious and hazardous mission, he got a chance to test his abilities on the ground of his incompetence. Later in Mansud’s reign, however, Ayaz was appointed as governor of Qazvin and Kurdistan.

In Persian literature, much has been written about Ayaz’s role in the history of Iran, his skill, bravery, and loyalty. Farrokhzad, one of Mohammad’s court poets, praised Ayaz in his work, describing him as valiant, brave and handsome.

Sultan Mahmud’s relationship with Ayaz had many other impacts. Ayaz and Ayaz’s mother had a close relationship with Ayaz’s mother, who was present in Persian literature as something different and important in their society.

Nezem Arzani, Altar, Rez and some other Persian poets have made references to the story of Mahmud’s relationship with Ayaz in their works.

Teheran Municipality dedicates cultural centers to Muharram mourning rituals during pandemic

Last month, President Hassan Rouhani said that Muharram mourning rituals must be held with observing health protocols and social distancing.

During a meeting of the Coronavirus Combat and Prevention Headquarters, Rouhani said that the mourning ceremonies for Imam Hussein (AS), the grandson of the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH) and the martyrdom anniversary of Imam Hussein (AS), the grandson of the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH), are very important and everyone must take the necessary measures to avoid any problems.

It means that the mourning ceremonies for Imam Hussein (AS) must be held throughout the country gloriously, with a precise observation of health protocols.

Produced at Iran’s Experimental and Documentary Film Center, “Eaten” has been screened at numerous festivals around the world. In 2020, it won the special jury award at the 15th Tehran International Animation Festival, and the best feature award by the Institute for Intellectual Development of Children and Young Adults (EIDCA) every year.

In this edition, beyond bringing light to those who serve and are serving on the front lines of duty, we want to bring light and rethink what makes us human,” the organizers of the Anibar festival have said.

“How under extreme circumstances we have to make choices and decisions that might conflict with our values and principles as human beings. And here under these circumstances we can change the narrative of our story, our sense of community and our relation to the environment,” they added.

German writer Sebastian Fitzek’s “Package” received at Iranian bookstores

When the postman asks her to accept a parcel for a neighbor whose name she has never heard before, she is forced to love her house for the first time in six months and loses her judgment of reality and delusion. Fitzek was born in Berlin in 1945. After going to law school, he decided on a judicial profession for a creative occupation in the media.

After an internship at a private radio station he switched to the competition as head of entertainment and became chief editor later on, thereafter becoming an independent executive consultant and format developer for numerous media companies in Europe.
