Iranian-made warship joins IRGC naval fleet

The multipurpose vessel, which is 150 meters long, is equipped with different types of aircraft, drones, heli- copters, and missiles. The ship can use both land and missile, air-defense and radar systems. The vessel is named after commander Abdolah Roukabi from the IRGC's Navy.

In a speech on Friday, Rouhani announced the launch of a naval base in the Caspian Sea, which he stated was 'important to the national interest'.

According to the IRGC Commander, the ship was launched due to the government's decision to develop a naval base in the Caspian Sea. The first phase of the project will see the construction of a naval base in the northern Caspian Sea.
