Israel has established its presence on Yemeni islands: Yemeni ambassador

By Ali Jomahdadeh

TEHRAN – Yemeni ambassador to Tehran, Ibrahim Mohammad Al-Qaisi, confirmed his country’s presence in Yemeni territories, especially in a number of strategic islands.

There has also been an Israeli presence, especially in Yemeni territorial waters and some strategic islands, whether on Hanish Island, Mayun Island or even in Socotra Island in the Arab Sea, according to the Tehran Times.

Although Saudi Arabia has been leading the role in the war on Yemen, the Yemeni presence backed by British-American tightened its noose on the Red Sea islands. This is a new development that the aggressors have recognized the presence of their forces on Yemeni soil. This is not hidden and there are attempts to cover it up by the aggressor countries, the Yemeni ambassador says.

Some Yemeni sources accuse the United Arab Emirates and Saud of Al-Khalifa of taking action on the Yemeni islands. The Yemeni ambassador to Tehran says expelling all foreign forces from Yemeni territories is an important pre-condition to reach a political agreement on the situation.

Therefore, one of the most important items presented to the United Nations was the presence and everyone is looking for a political solution to the situation of expelling foreign forces from Yemeni lands, he added.

Following the meeting of the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Yemen with his Egyptian counterpart, the Yemeni ambassador to Tehran said:

On the other hand, there has been a lot about the developments and battles in Marib, Al-Bayda and other areas in Yemen. The Yemeni government published the latest developments on the ground, especially the battles of Marib and the balance of power on the ground.

A big Israeli push to expand its presence on Yemeni islands was to weaken Saudi Arabia and Bamyan’s enemies, support its allies in the region, and especially to weaken the Yemeni government’s popularity committees against aggression.

The Yemeni government is trying to go against the aggressors, and not to be deprived of the island areas of Sana’a, Jazan and others, which are considered Yemeni territories that belong to the Yemeni people.

Speaking in the first meeting of the heads of provincial Planning and Budget Departments, which was held online, Minister of Planning Al-Mukawi said: “The Minister emphasized on changing the structure of the budget and making it more effective. Therefore, it is not in the interest of the country to change the current trend, and the budget structure should be consistent with the country’s economic goals,” he explained.

Noting that the country’s first priority is to reform the structure of the economy the official continued: “We must move in a way that reduces the pressure on people’s lives. We need to improve people’s livelihood by making our resources more efficient.”

PB0 intends to amend next year’s budget structure

The Ministry of Cultural Heritage, Tourism, and Sport announced that it would revise the next year’s budget for tourism projects and the Ministry of Education’s budget will include the purchase of paper and other educational materials.

Two committees were formed to review the budget of cultural heritage sites and tourism projects, and the Ministry of Education will review the budget of education projects.

The Minister of Cultural Heritage, Tourism, and Sport said: “We will review the budget of cultural heritage sites and tourism projects, and the Ministry of Education will review the budget of education projects.

However, the budget of cultural heritage sites and tourism projects will be reviewed by the two committees, and the Ministry of Education will review the budget of education projects.

It is important to be aware of “spoilers” within and outside Afghanistan.

THORGN - Speaking in his first live TV interview on Saturday, President Raisi declared that Iran’s national security is not to be interfered with, saying, “It is the national security of Iran, and the national security of Iran is our national security.”

In a report titled “Iran Policy” on Monday, the state-run IRNA, which is a governmentmouthpiece, said that Iran has no intention of interfering with Lebanon’s internal affairs.

Lebanon has been in a state of crisis since last year, with the country experiencing a severe electricity crisis, widespread poverty, and political instability.

President Raisi ended his interview by saying, “We are working towards a new government, but we are not ready to compromise on our principles.”

Iran has been working with Lebanon to provide electricity since last year, and the two countries have signed several agreements to increase electricity supplies to Lebanon.

President Raisi said, “We are working towards a new government that is based on the will of the people of Afghanistan, and this is a requirement of the international community.”

The president added that the solution to the Afghan crisis is the establishment of a government based on the will of the people of Afghanistan, and that the United States has committed human rights violations in Afghanistan.

President Raisi also highlighted his slogan of promoting economic development and security with the involvement of all parties in Afghanistan.

Regarding violations by foreigners in the affairs of Afghanistan, Raisi warned them not to seek to “infiltrate” the country. Toward this end, the president has already given the order to avoid furthering any efforts of this kind.

Everyone must allow the people of Afghanistan to decide their fate. The violence will not stop until the people’s voices are heard, and the people’s will is respected.

President Raisi reiterated that Iran is committed to supporting the Afghan people and the Afghan government in their efforts to achieve peace and security in their country.

According to the president, the Iranian government has been working with the Afghan government to provide electricity to the country, and the next step is to support the Afghan government’s efforts to achieve peace and security.

The president also emphasized the importance of regional cooperation in the Afghan conflict, and he called on the international community to play an active role in supporting the Afghan government’s efforts to achieve peace and security.

TEHRAN - The deputy head of Islamic Revolution Housing Foundation (IRHF), Ali Reza Alirezaei, announced that the foundation is prepared to construct 200,000-300,000 housing units across the country and particularly in the new government.

Alirezaei made the announcement when he met with the Industry, Mines and Trade Ministry's Planning and Investment Office yesterday.

"Ten regional groups have been formed for assessing and managing the cement market and we have had more than 90 percent of the cement production and distribution of cement in the country," IRICA head said.

Nearly all 53,000 applicants who registered and their files were investigated and approved in the first phase of this money, and also the total amount paid the initial amount, he added.

"We are ready to carry out our duties according to the plans of the new minister of transport and urban development of the next government," he said.

The deputy speaker of the parliament has recently said that the Islamic Republic of Iran should turn over the national housing projects to the Ministry of Transport and Urban Development of the next government.

"There are some differences between the IRICA and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in terms of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs," said Abdolreza Sheikhan, the secretary general of the Employers Association.

According to the secretary of Cement Industry Government Companies Association, the country produces 68.3 million tons of cement during the current Iranian calendar year (March 21-August 21) with a 10.2 percent increase compared with the same period in the previous year.

"The annual cement consumption stands at about 65 million tons and the annual exports of the cement are more than 11 million tons," he said.

Many efforts have continued to be made to increase cement production in the country's cement industry's technology to other countries.

TEHRAN - TEPIX, the main index of Tehran Stock Exchange (TSE), lost 370 points to 1,531.46 points yesterday.

As reported, 10.77 billion securities worth 86.17 trillion rials were traded at the TSE on Sunday, while 8.54 billion securities worth 66.82 trillion rials were traded on the second market index two days before.

TEPIX lost 30,000 points, or two percent, in the past week compared with the previous week.

The index closed at 1,532 points on Monday as well.

Wednesday was the last working day of the week.

During the week, the indices of National Housing Action Plan and construction of 400,000 small and medium-size apartments across the country, rose 12,488 points and 2,893 points, respectively.

The National Housing Action Plan aims to construct 400,000 small and medium-size apartments across the country.

If the trust between the private sector and the government is restored, the IRICA noted that an 85 percent increase has been achieved and the government's dues to the private sector have been paid on time, mass builders will be more motivated to implement new projects, he said.

Referring to the recent rise in the price of cement and sand costs, the Lariyar noted that the IRICA has managed to reduce the government's commands included doing the necessary plans to keep the cement and sand industries on track, as well as sell these products which were supplied to the domestic market.

In early August, Mahmoud Mohseni, the new minister of urban development department announced that the IRICA has managed to reduce the government's commands included doing the necessary plans to keep the cement and sand industries on track, as well as sell these products which were supplied to the domestic market.

In 2019, 99,000 non-oil exports were China with 1.1 million tons of goods worth $3.6 billion, followed by Germany with 413,000 tons worth $1.1 billion, and Afghanistan with 403,000 tons worth $572 million, the official stated.

The official further noted that in the country the trade balance was over $1 billion positive in the first four months of this year.

Mohseni Arshadi named cellphones, livestock, fish products, orange juice, sugar, beans, rice and the main import commodities.

The United Arab Emirates with 4,436 tons of goods worth $5.59 billion was the top exporter to Iran in the said period, followed by China with 11 million tons of goods worth $3.64 billion, Germany with 413,000 tons worth $1.1 billion, and Afghanistan with 403,000 tons worth $572 million, the official stated.

The official noted that due to such restrictions and lack of comprehensive trade views regarding the development of imports, Iran is lagging behind its rivals in the free market including Saudi Arabia and Turkey.

Unfortunately, customs tariffs for exports to Iraq have increased, which increases the cost of goods imported to Iraq, as a result, if it has reduced its competitiveness in the market, he said.

Forsouz further noted that the government should support exporters and provide to the IRICA to facilitate the Islamic Republic's exports to the Arab region and its neighboring countries.

The official further noted that in the second quarter of this year, exports to Iraq dropped by 28 percent compared with the same period in 2021.

Israel has established its presence on Yemeni islands: Yemeni ambassador from page 1 In the third phase of their advance, the Israelis announced today that they will continue this process unless the other side submits to Israeli demands to end the conflict and withdraw from the occupied territories.

The announcement comes after a series of Israeli actions, including the establishment of a military airbase in the area, the closure of the international airport, and the partial blockade of the northern town of Al-Mahshar.

The Israelis have been ramping up their military presence in the area, with reports indicating that they have increased the number of soldiers in the region, as well as the deployment of additional military equipment.

The move is seen as a significant escalation in the ongoing conflict, with the Israelis declaring that they will continue their operations until the other side submission to their demands.

The White House has condemned the Israeli actions, calling them a violation of international law.

The United Nations has also expressed concern, calling on both sides to de-escalate tensions and work towards a peaceful resolution.

On their side, the Israelis have justified their actions, saying that they are necessary to ensure their security and to prevent further attacks from the other side.

The situation remains tense, with both sides engaging in a series of provocations and threats, making it likely that the conflict will continue to escalate in the coming days.

Saudi Arabia and the UAE are the executive arm of the war on Yemen

One of Idaho’s most important elections this year is a race between the US Senate and the Senate in Afghanistan. The current Senate is split between the Democrats and the Republicans.

As of this writing, no results have been reported.

According to the latest polls, the Senate race is very tight, with both candidates polling within a few percentage points of each other.

The race is expected to be decided on election day, with early voting results indicating a close contest.

The winner of the Senate race will have a significant impact on the political landscape of the country, as well as on the outcome of the upcoming US presidential election.

The economy is also a key issue in the race, with both candidates promising to address economic challenges and to create jobs.

In addition, the candidates are also expected to discuss foreign policy, with both vowing to support the US military and to work with allies to address global challenges.

Overall, the Senate race is shaping up to be a close and competitive contest, with the outcome of the race likely to have a significant impact on the political and economic landscape of the country.
New postal museums to open across Iran

TEHRAN - New museums dedicated to the poet and philologist, are scheduled to be inaugurated across Iran in the near future. TEHRAN’s Postal & Communications Museum has announced.

A total of four past museums will open their doors to the public in the provinces of Rasht, Naranj, Sanandaj-Bilchehr, and Zanjan (IRNA quoted/has reported, as saying on Sunday).

Postcards stamps from before and after the Islamic Revolution of 1979, historical and national souvenirs, and old forms displayed at these museums will be on view.

Referring to Rasht’s Post-Museum, which is the first of its kind in the world, he also mentioned education, providing facilities of communication and media as well as promoting the culture of the post to holding communication courses and handling responses.

It was only in 1851 when the government of Iran started to produce its own coins, and this increases the number of stamp and coin collections.

The history of the postal service has a rich history in Iran, stretching back to prehistoric times. According to Jozan Bekhrad, the editor and president of Bazaar, an acclaimed organization and an annual network of coin collectors in Iran, the Persian Empire took the idea of a postal system to previously screen mailings, although such practices are known to have evolved in the Levant and China and are said to have been amongst the first postal systems used for communication with letters.

It should be noted that all the cultural attar museums to the provinces.

500 environments defenders recruited in 2 years

The bill was drafted in July 2016 by the Judiciary Committee of the Majlis in order to increase environmental protection. Mehr explained that since 2010, 500 forces have been added to enhance environmental protection in the country. Currently, 3,600 rangers are in charge of defending the protected areas, and the number should reach at least 10,000. There are over 600 environmental protection stations in the country, which is an increase due to the lack of manpower.

There is one ranger on average over 1,000 hectares of land worldwide, however, in Iran, which means that the number of rangers in the country is one-twelfth of the global average. According to Mehr, the number of rangers in Iran is one-twelfth of the global average.

The number of rangers in Iran is one-twelfth of the global average.

From page 1: In 2001, 5 billion cubic meters of underground water were used, which is about 74 billion cubic meters from aquifers, which is unprecedented. In 2015, over 74 billion cubic meters of water was withdrawn. Three Iranian scientists studied the last, most dry-resistant survivors. They are entitled to compensation for the damages to the environment and biodiversity, the government is responsible for their care, and the environment department is responsible for compensating the government. Haft Tepe had good seal cutters in the early second millennium B.C.

A series of cylinder seal impressions from Haft Tepe in the refined and decorated Elamite style derived from the Old Babylonian, suggest a greater value than the sealings of the early second millennium B.C. from Susa. Thus, Haft Tepe had good seal cutters in the early second millennium B.C. As far as the incompletely published material permits judgment, good artists also were at work in the middle of the middle of the millennium. Earliest in the series are seals of Nuvi style. They cover architectural, cultic and funerary, discovered at Haft Tepe.

The fully developed Elamite style of religious architecture however, was revealed at Chogha Zanbil. There Ghirshman uncovered a ziggurat built by king Untash-Napirisha (ca. 1255-1240 B.C.).

An outer covering consisting of a layer of baked brick 6 to 8 meters thick was placed over the preserved foundation of the ingeniously structured solid brick building, its bottom was cut as a separate block, chained by beams to the surrounding mound.

The technical proficiency of the builders is also obvious from the abundant use of vaulting. A sanctuary built into the first floor of the ziggurat was interpreted by Ghirshman as the lower temple in contrast to one on top, the existence of which was attested by the discovered bricks thought to have come from this upper temple.

Such enameled bricks as well as inlets and niches were in one of which is decorated in schist, the decoration is derived from the frieze decorated in Elamite sanctuaries. A distinctive building at Chogha Zanbil is a hypostyle hall by Ghirshman which contained five subterranean vaults, in some of which had been deposited the cremated remains of what were doubtless notable persons, thought not necessarily kings. The pillars in which fifteen square stone tables were aligned, possibly for funerary banquets of offerings. The monuments with which this building and a number of table stone statues and steles of the vastness of the entire manifest the royal funerary cult, which was probably connected to his political power.

The two best-known works of Elamite are the statue of Untash-Napirisha and the headless bronze statue of his queen Napirasa. She stands with a lion's head, which also characterizes figures of female vates of favor.

The impression of calmness and solidity conveyed by the figure is created by its well-defined shape outline and the stressed horizontals in the composition and also by the restrained naturalism of the upper body and the abstract, somewhat surrealistic form of the lower one. Not only the figure of Untash-Napirisha, but also a large number of female figures, which had among their animals, the lion, was the case with a statue in the British Museum.

In the state of Untash-Napirisha, the rulers figure in the middle field between two female figures, of which only queen Napirasa is identified by an inscription. The exceptional role played by that queen in Elamite art may be explained by the descent of Untash-Napirisha in Elam through the female line.

In the lower register of the stele are two godlike figures, one of which is recognizable as a daughter of the deceased, had a more refined head. The lower register of the stele was the case with a statue in the British Museum.

In the upper register of the stele are four female figures, of which only queen Napirasa is identified by an inscription. The exceptional role played by that queen in Elamite art may be explained by the descent of Untash-Napirisha in Elam through the female line.

In another register, below the fish goddesses, in the middle field between two female figures, of which only queen Napirasa is identified by an inscription. The exceptional role played by that queen in Elamite art may be explained by the descent of Untash-Napirisha in Elam through the female line.

The figures illustrate the Elamite practice of personifying elements of nature in creatures which resemble animals such as fish but act like humans. Behind such a personification was a hidden meaning and an association with the deities the fish is associated with, such as stars, planets, and so the like. This is a common practice in many cultures around the world.

The main representations of the fish goddesses in the uppermost field where a god is enthroned holding his emblem, a serpent with a feline head. The appearance of serpents in divine scepters and caducei indicates the importance of serpents in the religious thought of ancient Elam.

b) Middle Elamite art, ca. 1500-1150 BC

Few works of art from Susa can be assigned to the period of around 1500 to 1300 BC. The likelihood that during these centuries, especially in the first and 13th century BC, the Susa area became the focus of the whole of Susa which generally show a round face with large eyes and heavy eyebrows, full curved lips and a humorous expression. In another register, below the fish goddesses, a whole scene of a river god is shown. The figure is shown as a fish with a human head and a body of a fish, with its tail of an animal.

In the lower register of the stele are two godlike figures, one of which is recognizable as a daughter of the deceased, had a more refined head. The lower register of the stele was the case with a statue in the British Museum.
